Topsy the elephant served many years as a circus elephant on Coney Island before she killed 2 of her caretakers, was sentenced to death, and got electrocuted by Thomas Edison using alternating current (AC) in order to prove its deadliness. It is on Youtube now.

THANK YOU!

Maria W Horn for bringing drones from the dark and to the dance, making music that makes my limbs tremble, and for wearing black on sunny days.

Josefin Hinders for shedding the most beautiful light whilst keeping a dark mind, lurking behind metal shields and for sharing her fantasies about bearded taxi drivers.

Katti Alm for becoming a coiler in short time, spending hours on metal and sparks, keeping helpers at bay and doing her dramaturging from a cage.

Frida Tiger for showing up like a tiger on Sergels torg and making all of this stay somehow coherent, making things happen when they needed to and surviving a deadly fever.

Andros Zins-Browne for being the shitfixer of all times, showing up at moments of shattered pieces of fascination, and bringing me to concentration with a constant laugh up the ass.

Finn Hammer for never giving up on our tesla coil, for an intense fascination for combining metal work with foot work, spark gaps with buddhism. All my good luck for the success with fusion.

Roya Nikjoo for being the master of high voltage and making others shove copper rods into deep holes.

Niklas Ren for being a big man at the right moment and knowing how to put metal gloves on ladies fingers.

Sandra Linnell for encouraging my inner nerd to blossom, for sharing the fascination for knowledge, and lack thereof, and for liking Tesla too.

Zoë Poluch for an neverending belief in experimentation and for daring to reside in blurry waters, trying to dodge cheap products and keeping me on the ground and on my toes, forever.

Jennifer Råsten, Ina Dokmo and Ninni Blom for letting me and Sandra Linnell ask them everything we wanted to know about electricity and invisible powers.

Anna Grip, Zoë Poluch, Eleanor Bauer and Chrysa Parkinson and everyone taking part in the dance classes for teaching eachother how to dance, I am forever grateful for the sensory literacy you practice.

Miroslav Kosanic, Nikola Milenic, David Choi and Erik Gabrielsson and the makerspaces of Belgrade, New York and Stockholm for joining me in soldering together my own Tiny Tesla coil. One day it will work.

Branimir Jovanovic at the Tesla Museum, Zorica Civric at the Museum for Technical Science and Lale Erić at the Center for the promotion of science in Belgrade for talking about Tesla with me.

Jane Alcorn at Tesla science center and Joe Kinney at Hotel New Yorker, in New York, for taking me on guided tour on secret grounds.

The MDT team and the STATION team for letting me mess about in their studios forever, Magnus Nordberg for always being there, the Interim kultur team for keeping track on us, the Riksteatern team for making a future and storing a coil, the C.off team for lending me a studio, Rashaun Mitchell for lending me his studio at Tisch, the Jens for driving me to Wardenclyffe and encouraging me to meet men, the Halla for lending me her skills on theatre, the flourescent eyes to came to the showings, the friends who keep me tight and I have to stop now before it becomes something even more too much, but basically, nothing, least of all a solo, is made alone.
